If disability exists, whether total or only partial, any honorably discharged soldier who served three months in the war, I care not who he may be, is justified, in my opinion, in subscribing to the above declaration. The examining surgeons will determine the degree of disability. As I understand it, disability, whether incurred during a term of enlistment or subsequently entitles the soldier to the benefits of the bill. The soldier who lost an arm in a threshing machine or through an accident suffered the amputation of a leg, or is crippled with rheumatism or has his life made miserable by any or all of the diseases to which poor suffering humanity is heir, when not the result of his own victous habits, comes within the scope of the bill. In fact it was created for just this class of our comrades.

I do not think it is the intention of the rojectors of the bill that a claimant must projectors of the bill that a claimant must declare himself a pauper in order that he may reap its benefits. The wording of the bill has been severely criticised by all leading Grand Army men, and it was for this reason as much as anything else that the service pension bill was so vigorously pushed. So far as this bill being a dragnet is concerned the aspersion reflect both on the honor of the claimant and the integrity of the examining boards. The

As the time for taking census will soon have expired, which will be on the 30th, it is a good deal of importance that none should be missed. If the enumerator has failed to see you, or if the reader of this item residing in the city knows of anyone who has not been enumerated, it will be a great favor to the census takers if you will make it known in some way, either by telephoning to this office, giving name and place, or to any one of the enumerators, or telephone to the secretary of the board of trade. The potency of lunar influence in worldly matters was at one time almost universally acknowledged, and even now many of the errors and superstitious connected with the moon still held their ground among rustic populations. Among popular su-perstitions is the belief that the rays of ne moon, falling upon a sleeping person cause his face to become distorted, and, as some aver, even deprive him of his senses -in fact, lunatics were so named from their supposed susceptibility to lunar infinence, and "moonstruck" is a common term for a state of mental aberration bor-

The phases of the moon are supposed to exert a marked influence over the growth of mushrooms, and formerly, in order that the best time for killing pigs was con-sidered to be when the moon was on the increase or near the full. One sometimes meets with the superstition that when the moon cemes in and goes out on a Sunday seed planted during that month will not grow. Hair, it is said, should be out at the new moon, otherwise it is liable to fall off. Corns, on the other hand, should be cut during the waning of the moon in order that they may gradually diminish and ultimately disappear. English country folk bow or curtsey to the new moon, and by some it is also supposed that a made at such a time will be gratified. It sheld, too, that the money in one's pocket should be turned for luck. To see the new moon through glass, however, is considered unincky. When the moon is on its back, that is to say with the horns of the crescent pointing upward, it is thought by some to indicate frost. Sharp horns of the new moon are supposed to presage wind, and when the outline of the entire planet can
